Singapore, October 25, 2018 -- Moody's Investors Service says that the credit profile of the Eurasian Development Bank (EDB, Baa1 stable) reflects its strong capital and liquidity. These factors are balanced against a fragile operating environment and often uncertain access to funding.

The capacity of the bank's members to provide extraordinary support in times of need may also be constrained.

Moody's conclusions are contained in its just-released Annual credit analysis titled "Eurasian Development Bank - Baa1 stable" and which examines the bank in three categories: capital adequacy, which Moody's assesses as "medium"; liquidity "medium"; and strength of member support "low".

The report constitutes an annual update to investors and is not a rating action.

Moody's report points out that after four consecutive years of increases, the EDB's asset coverage ratio — which compares an entity's usable equity with assets that can incur losses — moderated in the first half of 2018, as loan growth accelerated. Nevertheless, the ratio remains high, supporting the bank's capital adequacy.

The EDB's leverage ratio, which is in line with other A- and Baa-rated multilateral development banks, also edged higher during the first half of 2018 versus the end of 2017, as the borrowing environment improved and the bank took on more debt.

However, both the EDB's asset coverage ratio and its leverage ratio are at strong levels relative to peers.

More broadly, higher oil prices and stronger remittances growth have supported the economic growth in EDB member countries, particularly over the past year. This situation has produced a more conducive operating environment, as reflected in positive outlooks on Moody’s ratings for Russia (Ba1 positive) and Armenia (B1 positive).

However, legacy issues reflecting higher government debt levels and banking sector weaknesses have left the Commonwealth of Independent States countries vulnerable to shocks.

And, while the EDB's provisioning policy appears sound, its asset quality is exposed to weaknesses stemming from a loan book concentrated in the mining sector. In addition, strong liquidity is offset by uncertain access to funding; reflecting the nature of the markets on which the bank relies.

Moody's also explains that the EDB members' strength to support the bank is reduced by the possibility that — in the unlikely scenario that it requires financial support — key members, primarily Russia and Kazakhstan (Baa3 stable), would themselves be experiencing financial stress.

Moody's could upgrade the rating if improvements in asset quality are sustained, including through a track record of sound lending policies that result in lower nonperforming loans (NPLs). Diversifying the bank's funding profile in favor of more liquid markets and indications of stronger member support than Moody's currently assesses would also likely prove credit positive.

Conversely, Moody's could downgrade the rating if NPL levels rise, signaling a less vigilant lending policy than Moody's currently assesses; if liquidity or capital adequacy deteriorates because loan or treasury asset quality has weakened; or if the credit profiles of the EDB's major borrowers or shareholders deteriorate significantly.
